What Remains
Bolechow, Ukraine 2007

At the destroyed synagogue in Bolechow – a nightclub during the years of the Soviet Union, and a ruin today.

Synagogue Bema (Stage)
Mukachevo Synagogue, Ukraine 2007

Mikva
Chernivtsi, Ukraine 2007

In Judaism, Mikva is a ritual bath designed for the purpose of immersion for ritual purity. In one ritual among many, Orthodox Jewish women are obligated to immerse in a Mikva between the end of the menstruation period and resuming sexual relations with their husbands.

*Sheindl and Lev
Bershad Synagogue, Ukraine 2006*

Lev, who had been the synagogue's usher, and his wife Sheindl sit in the synagogue. Lev died about six months after this photograph was made.

*Helena At Her Window
Slovotino, Ukraine 2007*

Helena Huber is a Hungarian Jew and one of the last Jews of her hometown, Slovotino. Her son, Bela Huber, lives in Uzhgorod and is head of the Jewish community of the Transcarpathian region. His two brothers remain in Slovotino.

*Soup Kitchen
Mukachevo, Ukraine 2007*

Regina Berkowitz
Truskavetz, Ukraine 2007

Regina was ten when she was taken to Auschwitz with her mother and brother. While standing in the selection line, a German officer saw her playing with a cat and spared her life. Regina's mother and brother were sent to the gas chambers. Since then, Regina has been taking care of cats in her neighborhood.

After Tfila (Ritual) at the Synagogue Remains Drohobych, Ukraine 2007

The two Rabbis met at the historic Great Choral Synagogue in Drohobych to make plans for possible renovations. After the meeting, they prayed at the spot and opened with a dance to celebrate life.
